Scells The Taylor Family Here

N. R. Feathers'on, local histor-an, who keeps up not only with fac s on Old Appomattox, but also with former Appomattox citizens, called attention this week to a very prominent family formerly residing here.... that of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Taylor.

Mr. Taylor was born in 1852 and died in 1927. He lived at Wildway, in the old Bocock home. Originally he came from the Stonewall section of the county. When he died at the age of 75, he was survived by his widow and the following 11 children: Jean, Grace, Ethel, Charlie, Maggie, Sam, Sallie, William, Sue, Lizzie and Olive. Mr. Feather-ston reports that Mrs. Taylor and all of the children are all living and successful.

Appomattox is a growing town.

Appomattox Lions Club meets tonight.

"Build-Up" Important Protector of Women

A weak, undernourished condition often enables functional dysmenorrhea to get a foothold; thus leads to much of woman's suffering from headaches, nervousness, and other periodic ailments.

CARDUI'S principal help for such distress comes from the way it usually stimulates appetite; increases flow of gastric juice; thus aids digestion; helps build energy, strength, physical resistance to periodic pain for many.

Another way, many women find help for periodic distress: Take CARDUI a few days before and during "the time." Women have used CARDUI for more than 50 years!

Little Apples

By CHARLES OWEN

(Associated Newspapers.) WNU Service.

THE old soprano sat quietly, terribly observing, at a rear table of the Deodara cabaret. She wasn't so old, either, but she had the misfortune, in an age of perverted admirations, to be tall and largely built.

Twenty years ago she had been a beauty, with a strong dramatic voice that, if trained, might have withstood the havoc of Wagner. As it was, she had sung at the top of her voice to her father's cows in her childhood, overwhelmed the feeble vocalization of the village choristers, and come to the city. She had earned at once, because big women and strong voices were the mode.

Now she drank coffee—paid her cover charge — ate indifferent French pastries to get away from herself, and watched half-starved girls with no features kick and wriggle to the cacophonies of saxophones and trap drums.

If she had been an educated woman she could have coped with her conflicting emotions. She did know the reason she had chosen this restless place to rest in. It was because the doorway boasted a window where a large plate of little apples, her favorite fruit, were displayed.

The incessant clicking of countless high heels on the polished floor irritated her nerves. She felt listless, she, who had never had a sick day in her life. She hated the lack of beauty in the chorus — beauty of figure, of face, of voice. She wished for one moment she could get up and sing and show what volume and resonance were (only she did not use these words, of course).

She looked down at her feet. Smaller in proportion than those of the thin-legged girls who danced. Her clothes were rather good. She sewed well and had fair taste. She took out the little mirror in her handbag and glanced at her face.

"Gosh! I'd like to show 'em!" she said to herself, and then started; for some one touched her shoulder. She turned, prepared to fight. Her aggressiveness had been at once her greatest friend and foe.

"Maggie Grant! For Pete's sake! Don't you know me? Gee, but I'm glad to see you again. Say, don't tell me you've forgotten Dan! Dan Smith of the Pitt farm! Say, it's great to see you, but what are you doing here? I thought you were prima donna (he called it pryma) or something, eh?"

"I've quit all that, Dan," said the woman, after a startled pause, gathering her wits, as it were, and satisfying herself as to the man's identity. "I'm getting old. Besides, they don't think I'm good looking any more." She gazed rather ruefully at the syncopated steppers on the floor. "How've you been making out, Dan? Married, I suppose—and kids, and . . ."

"No, Maggie, I ain't married. Guess I'm not the marrying kind. I've done fair, though; can't complain as things are. I bought the Pierce place when old Tim Pierce died and it's good land for fruit. Remember them little apples you was so crazy about? Well, they sure do grow good down there and make me good money. I send 'em to the city regular. Fact is that fruit store by this place is a customer of mine. That's why I came in, being near by, and because I thought being a performer you might be here or they might know anyways where you was."

"Say, Dan, I came in here because I saw the apples. I loved them when I was a kid and I do now, only everything costs so high in the city."

Dan was lost in thought. "Say, Maggie, you mean to tell me those skinny yellow kids with their painted cheeks are reckoned good looking? Say, you'd beat 'em every time. How's the pipes, Maggie? Say, I wish you could give us a song right now." With Dan to think was to act, and before Maggie could stop him he was off and talking to the harassed-faced leader of the orchestra.

Maggie waited impatiently. This wasn't a farm. What did Dan mean, anyhow?

"Come, Maggie," he said, taking her hand, "the leader wants you to sing, 'Annie Laurie' and 'Down the Vale.' Will you, Maggie? I always did like your pipes."

The old soprano lifted her fine head and walked gracefully to the piano.

If there was any empty-headed, hysterical laughter it soon died down, for Maggie was a force and knew how to reach an audience. Her voice filled the room and suggested that she was using only half her powers, as, indeed, was the case. She stood there a Hebe among automata, a woman among dolls.

Refusing any encore, she walked back to her table proudly, smiling her acknowledgments as a prima donna might do. The leader clamored for her to come again. She was swathed in applause that seemed to melt some of the stiffness in her heart.

"Well, Maggie, what's it to be, applause or—or—little apples?" Dan asked her this as they sat at supper in a good cafe by Maggie's hotel.

"Little apples, I guess. You see, I'm getting old."

PASTURES AIDED BY PROPER CARE

Turf Should Be Worked Before Re-Seeding.

By C. H. FARNHAM
(University of Illinois College of Agriculture.)

Thinning hair is pretty hard to stop, but thinning pastures can be rejuvenated.

Since the seedbed largely determines the success of a pasture, the turf of old pastures should be summer-plowed and worked down several times before reseeding in late August or early September. In some cases thorough disking will help if existing grasses and weeds won't compete too much with the new seedings.

Because continued pasturing or cropping reduces the content of calcium, phosphorus and other plant food materials, most old pastures need limestone and fertilizer. Need of limestone, which can be determined by an acidity test, usually shows up first. Limestone should be applied several months ahead of legume seedings so it will have time to sweeten the soil before seeding time.

If the land is to be plowed, it is best to apply the limestone after plowing so it will sweeten the upper portion of the root system as well as the deeper soil areas. Limestone does not move up in the soil but the solution goes downward. Lightly working manure into the soil before seeding pasture mixtures also gives them a boost in establishing root and top growth.

On steep slopes, it is best to do all the plowing and disking on the level contour. He recommends that any sod draws that have developed should be left undisturbed to form grass waterways.

Pasture improvement, contour farming, seeding of legumes and applications of limestone constitute four of the five practices being stressed in 1940 to achieve more conservation of soil, water and human resources. The other practice is tree planting.

Submarine Detectors

Submarine detectors in 1917 picked up sound vibrations that traveled from the submarine's electric motors to the listening devices of the U-boat hunters. In the present-war a new type of detector is being used which bounces sound to the submarine hull and back again. The time interval shows the precise depth of the lethal "fish." It is reported that this echo machine makes it possible to locate submarines fairly consistently at distances up to six miles.

In the Kaiser's war the "subs" sometimes were able to avoid detection by running so slowly that their motors were virtually vibrationless. But few submarine commanders, it is said, could resist the temptation to flee at high speed—especially when a depth bomb or two was dropped in their general vicinity.

THE EVER-PRESENT GOD

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 139:1-12, 23, 24.
GOLDEN TEXT—If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.—John 14:23.

"The Psalm of the Unavoidable God"—so Abingdon characterizes Psalm 139, but goes on to say, "It's main theme is 'God Cares.' He cares personally and individually." The omniscience and omnipresence of God, in the trying of the hearts of men, rightly brings fear to the ungodly, but to those who love and serve Him it can bring only assurance and joy.

The sublime concept of God here presented is an evidence of the divine inspiration of the Bible, for no human philosopher could ever have attained to or expressed such an understanding of the true nature of God. Only the infinite, all-knowing God, speaking through man, could give us this magnificent Psalm. It reveals that

I. God Knows Everything (vv. 1-6).

He is entirely unlimited in His true and eternal knowledge of things. Man is always limited in his knowledge of himself, of the world in which he lives, and of God, except as He reveals Himself. Our knowledge is not only partial, but progressive, going from one fact to another; but God knows all things perfectly and entirely from the beginning, yes, from all eternity.

One might well suppose that such a Being would be concerned only with the great and mighty forces of the universe, but we are told that He has an exact and intelligent understanding of and interest in even such simple details of life as our "downsitting and . . . uprising."

God is not so foolish as man. He does not put things and power above personality. He is interested in you and in me—is vitally, personally and blessedly concerned about each one of us. Knowing all about us, He builds a garrison of understanding love around us (v. 5; see Phil. 4:7 R. V.), and keeps His eternally powerful but tender hand upon us, if we permit Him so to do. Readers, have you submitted your life to His control through Jesus Christ our Lord?

II. God is Everywhere (vv. 7-12). In our humanity we are limited, not only in knowledge, but also in our ability to be in more than one place at a time. The Bible tells us what our reason would expect; that God, the infinite One, is everywhere at all times. This does not mean (as the pantheist would have us believe) that God is lost in nature, bound up in the rocks and trees, but that He is everywhere immanent in majestic power and holy sustaining all things, controlling and directing the destinies of His universe. He is not afar off, letting the world care for itself (as the deist would say).

"But here in present majesty,
As in His courts on high."

The man who would hide from God and flee from the Holy Spirit finds no comfort in these verses. He may attempt to hide in heaven or in the abode of the dead, but God is there. If he could ride with the speed of morning light (v. 9) to the uttermost parts of the earth, God is there before him. Darkness, which men think will hide their evil deeds, is like daylight to "Him with whom we have to do" (Heb. 4:13).

But why flee from a loving God? Why not come to Him in loving obedience, and then with the psalmist rejoice that we "cannot get beyond the circle of His love"? What a blessed truth it is that wherever these lines are read—in the home, in the church, in a hospital, in a jail, in an airplane, in the depths of a mine, in darkness or in light, in the great city, or by one living alone in the wilderness—God, the infinite, all-knowing, eternal, loving God, is there. He is right at your side, reader. Turn to Him, count on Him, love Him, serve Him.

III. God Searches Man's Heart (vv. 23, 24).

Verse 3 of our psalm teaches that God searches the hearts of all men, but here we find the psalmist wisely inviting God to search his own heart. It is one thing to know a universal truth; it is another matter to make it personal. It is one thing to know that God, against my will, is pointing out to me the sin and rebellion of my heart; it is quite another thing to open my heart voluntarily to His searching scrutiny.

Why did the Psalmist ask God to search him? That in trying his thoughts any wickedness might be revealed and put away. That is the important point. It is not enough to know that sin is there. We must ask God to give us grace to put it out, that He may then lead us in the "way everlasting."

The Word of God points the way of righteousness in both heart and life. Who will decide this day to walk in that way—in fellowship with the all-knowing, ever-present Lord?

Observes Store Anniversary

H. M. BURGE

September 13, 1913, marked the beginning of a business which in the short space of twenty-seven years has grown into one of the largest and most successful in Central Virginia. That date was the occasion of the opening of the mercantile business of H. M. Burge.

Mr. Burge recalls that he had only two clerks when he began business in the Burke store building on the south side of the railroad track in Appomattox. And when the first day's business was done, a total of $14.13 had been taken in! From that beginning, wonderful strides have been made. The business now has over 30 on its pay-roll, and in addition to a large modern department store, operates Burge's Cafe, and three large service stations.

Through the years, Burge's has featured a large business in country produce, and maintains a large feed, seed and fertilizer business.

Burge's today announces a special 27th Anniversary Sale, notice of which will be found on Page 8..

Study Wardrobe Problem To Be Well Dressed

When a woman can be complimented on her ability to look "well dressed" on all occasions, it is probably because she has studied her wardrobe problems carefully, comments Miss Mary C. Whitlock, textile and clothing authority, department of home economics, University of Illinois college of agriculture.

Looking at last year's left-over summer garments in relation to present needs and in relation to the whole wardrobe should give any would-be shopper a basis on which to make her purchases, eliminating much of her indecision even before she reaches the store, Miss Whitlock said. The problem of securing becoming clothing can partially be solved if each homemaker will make a thorough study as to the texture, line and color of garments which appear the most becoming on her, the authority said. Thus the new garment may be fitted into the old wardrobe, yet it will have an up-to-date 1940 appearance and will appear to advantage in seasons to come.

Another point in the good clothing policy is to try on the garment and test it while moving around in a normal everyday manner rather than standing like a statue.

Homemakers are in an encouraging position today because manufacturers and retailers are gradually recognizing the wishes of consumers who are seeking information about the merchandise for which they are spending time, energy and money. By asking for specific information, the consumer can give the manufacturer some clue as to what she really desires in the way of merchandise.

Bindweed Control

In a study of root development of bindweed by the government it was discovered that this plant tends to exhaust its roots rather than to replenish them during the first few days of leaf growth, and that there is a definite advantage in waiting until the new shoots are four or five inches tall before destroying them. In practice, this means that cultivating at intervals of 14 to 21 days is more successfully than cultivation every week or 10 days. This finding puts control by tillage methods on a practical basis and has resulted already in large-scale bindweed-eradication programs being undertaken under state auspices in at least two of the more badly affected areas.

Farm Notes

For dairy farmers, two of the best practices for fall are the application of lime and of superphosphate.

* * *

In recent years, the cash income received by growers of oats in the United States has been less than half as large as it was in the years just before the World war.

* * *

From 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 gallons of darker grades of maple sirup are used each year, for flavoring pipe, cigarette, and chewing tobacco.

In 1939, United States farm land planted to soil-depleting crops was about 23,000,000 acres less than the average for the preceding 10 years.

LYNCHBURG FAIR

The premium book of the Lynchburg Agricultural Fair, to be held the week of September 23 to 28, on the fair grounds known as Textile Field, under the auspices of Lynchburg Post No. 16, American Legion, has made its appearance.

The catalog lists one of the largest aggregate amount of premiums in all departments that has ever been offered in recent years. The premium lists for exhibits will compare favorably with any of the larger county fairs in the South this year. Special stress has been made on the agricultural displays, both from a community standpoint as well as the individual displays.

BIG JUMP NOTED IN SEARS, ROEBUCK SALES

A 51 per cent jump in Sears, Roebuck and Co.'s purchases of Virginia made merchandise during 1939, was revealed today by R.F. Duncum, manager of the Sears store in Lynchburg.

Sharing in this company's expenditure of $5,683,627 for merchandise bough: within the state were 55 manufacturing concerns in 23 cities and towns.

The figures released by Mr. Duncum were drawn from a special report sent out by Sears' parent offices in connection with the company's 54th anniversary which will be celebrated from September 12 to September 28. The report also showed that this concern's total expenditures in Virginia during last year amounted to $4,517,093, an increase of 45 per cent.
